Cruise shipping, the most dynamic and fastest growing industry, is seen as a potential area for development by India. The Government of India has promulgated the ‘Policy for promoting Cruise Shipping’ on the coastline spread over 7,500 km. The necessary infrastructure, such as the development of marinas and berthing facilities, road and rail connectivity, etc. are taken up through Public Private Partnership projects. The environmental issues related to cruise shipping have also been identified for implementation. The major ports under the Government of India, namely Cochin Port, Chennai Port, Mumbai Port, Mormugao Port, New Mangalore Port and Port Blair are developing facilities for cruise shipping, in order to attract domestic and foreign tourists.
